HUNTING FOR ALLISON.

Charles Allison, head of the Allison Realty Company, owners of the building, could not be found by Coroner Scholer's men to-day. Mr. Allison was up all night, leading the search for the remains of his brother Frank, whose body is thought to be in the ruins. It is supposed that Mr. Allison went to get some sleep.

The amazing feature about the incident is the revelation ft brings of the utter contempt with which the orders of the Department of Buildings are treated by contractors and builders engaged in big jobs. Complaint after complaint was registered against this Darlington Hotel structure. The inspector says that he told the contractors they would have to stop work until hey compiled with the laws regulating the construction of buildings in New York. He reported the matter to his superiors. And all the time workmen kept piling up the framework of a building designed to be the home of hundreds of women and children, and this framework was patched with cast iron and joined like a toy house of blocks.

NOT A SOLITARY CASE.

To add to the cheerfulness of the occasion the Building Department plunteers the information that such building methods as caused the colpse of the Darlington are the rule rather than the exception. If Building Department inspectors are to be believed there are many apartment houses in New oYrk that are hanging together by virtue of the strength of the mortar between the bricks in the wails

The discouraging work of removing the podies from under the tons of steel and brick and from and cement that cover them was continued throughout the night, and by daylight several corpses had been uncovered, but were still out of reach of the workmen. Heroic tasks were performed by the devoted men, who burrowed their way through the debris, straining and hauling to make the pile of ruins give up its dead.

The first body recovered to-day was that of Adam Durwalder, wher's foreman, who was employed on the building when it fell. Al night long his widow had sat on a neighboring stoop waiting for news of the husband. When the dread information that his body had been found was conveyed to her she became hysterical and attempted to leap into the twisted mass of wreckage that marked the end of her husband.

Coroner Scholer and Fire Chief Croker arrived on the scene of the disnater soon after the first body was recovered to-day. The Coroner was accompanied by a Dr. Steubenbauer. He said that Dr. Steubenbauer would remain on the scene until it was definitely known that every man buried in the wreck is dead. If any should happen to be alive when uncovered Dr. Steubenbauer will be there.

Yesterday's disaster is another monument in the danger zone of Manhattan Island. Within a few blocks of the scene of the Darlington Hotel collapse have occurred some of the worst cases of wholesale slaughter of citizens of late years.

First there was the Hotel Royal fire at Fortieth street and Sixth ave nue. Then after an interval of some years came the horrible Windsor Hotel fire, at Forty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, and following the Windsor disester so closely that the echoes of one dying away have been succeeded by the clamor of another, have happened the collision in the Park arenue tunnel at Fifty-eighth street, the Park avenue explosion and the fire that consumed the Seventy-first Regiment armory and caused such losss of life in the Park Avenue Hotel.

Coroner Scholer will probably call an inquest on Monday to determine the responsibility for the disaster. He says that he believes the death list will run up to at least seventeen and that there are probably nine bodies uried in the ruins. Inquiries have been made of him concerning a man named Patterson, who was visiting a workman in the building when it caved in and has not been seen since.

Testimony disproving the contractors' stories of an explosion was given to the Coroner to-day by W. Harold Brown, of No. 61 West Forty-sixth street, next door to the Darlington building.

"I was at luncheon with my family," said Mr. Brown, "when I heard the poise of the collapse. I could hear every floor give way as the mass of debris plunged downward, and finally came the last tremendous roar when the debris reached the ground level. There was no explosion."

DREYFUS APPEAL

Evidence that Initial Signed to Letter Used Against Him Was Changed from "P" to "D."

LIEUT.-COL. HENRY'S PART IN THE AFFAIR PRESENTED

Tampering with Official Documents Set Forth in Records Offered for Defense-Dreyfus Not Present at Opening.

PARIS, March 3 .- Another stage in the effort of Alfred Dreyfus to obtain vindication was reached to-day when he Criminal Branch of the Court of Cassation, presided over by Counsellor Chambareaud, began at noon the conideration of the new facts upon which the former captain of artillery bases lowed by a pardon) imposed upon him by the court-martial at Rennes.

After the disposition of minor questions M. Chambareaud directed M. Fuss, seventy-four years old of No. 125 his report, in which, to the manifest the two new facts upon which the Minister of Justice, M. Valle, recommended a revision of the case. These were set forth as follows: "I. The secret documents include a letter bearing the initial 'D.' Now, by an affidavit of Oct. 6, 1903, signed by M. Gribelin (Keeper of the Archives), it earried the letter 'P.' For this latter was substituted a 'D,' and thus the before his appointment, my observation Cribdin sword during the inquiry of the Minister of War that this letter was false. It was crue, however, that the date of this document was March 28, 1856, when Dreyius was imprisoned on Devil's Island."

Mr. Webb said he wanted this denial to travel that the statement of Mr.

Dreyfus was imprisoned on Devil's Island."

The existence of a traitor in the French War Office was revealed by an alleged foreign diplomat. It is now claimed that Lieut. Col. Henry in 1897 caused a book of expenditures to be recopiad in order to remove all trace of payments to this diplomat, who, it has developed, was an employee of the Intelligence Department.

It was claimed by those present in court that if the new facts were acknowledged by the Tribunal the innocence of Dreyfus would be established. M. Boyer made an exhaustive review of the case, declaring he could not find any proof to establish the existence of the document which was claimed to have been annotated by the German Emperor, which was transmitted to one of Dreyfus' judges at Rennes.

There was no doubt, he added, of the transmission of the "Alexanderine" letter with the false date. The words in Lieut.-Col. Henry's handwriting had an unfavorable effect upon the court-marrial.

M. Boyer concluded with saying that the letters used against the accused the letters used against the accused were falsified prior to the proceedings were falsified pr

Lieut.-Col. Henry's handwriting had an unfavorable effect upon the court-martisl.

M. Eoyer concluded with saying that the letters used against the accused were falsified prior to the proceedings of 1998, but he ndded that this had not yet been judicially determined upon.

Attorney General Baudouin said that when he began his consideration of the Dreyfus case he was satisfied that a judicial error had not been committed, but as the invesigation proceeded his amazement increased.

"One by one," the Attorney General continued, "all the charges vanished, laving only accusations without importance or consistency.

"When I examined the secret collection of documents in the case and saw their miserable character, valuable only because of the mystery deverly thrown about them. I concluded it was necessary for justice to have the last word, and it is my conviction that there is not one of us, if in the army, and not an officer now in the army, who would not have succumbed had he been underen accusation thus managed."
